THE MIDDLE EAST: Anthropological Perspectives

This course discusses traditional subsistence economies (e.g., irrigation agriculture, pastoral nomadism) and tribal forms of social organization and analyzes their transformation with the emergence of independent territorial nation-states and the advent of oil wealth during the 20th century. The course considers different sects and expressions of Islam in specific countries and discusses kinship structures and family relationships, including the varying roles of women in specific societies. Contemporary political and economic issues and conflicts in Afghanistan, Iran, Turkey, Lebanon, and Israel/Palestine will be studied from an anthropologically informed perspective of cultural continuity and change and the continuous refashioning of religious, ethnic, and national identities over time.

An essay format open book take-home mid-term quiz will be handed out on March 12th (due back March 26th). Students can report and prepare a final paper on a topic of their own choice, chosen in consultation with Mr. Kohl. These topics can include: a) a specific ethnic group or local traditional feature (agricultural system, religious sect, etc.) in Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, Israel, or any Arab country; b) the status of women or practices related to women (e.g., veiling; marriage) in different Near Eastern contexts; and c) a specific contemporary political or economic issue/conflict analyzed anthropologically as done throughout the course. Students will be asked to make short (15 minute) oral presentations on their final projects in classes during the last month of the term. There will be no final exam but a short essay quiz will be given in the final class meeting on Friday May 7th. The final paper will be due at the end of exam period on May 21st. Grades for the course will be calculated roughly as follows: 30% for open book take-home mid-term; 40% for final paper; 15% for final essay quiz on May 7th; and 15% for class participation and the oral presentation. Students are invited to meet with Mr. Kohl at any time in his office (Pendleton East 345), particularly during his office hours: Tuesdays and Fridays 11:00AM to 12:15 PM (office extension: 2146).
