I. Overview

How do issues of gender continue to figure into the political agendas of contemporary South Asia? In this course, we will address the gendered dimensions of contemporary social, political, and economic debates in South Asia, while coming to grips with changing roles and representations of South Asian women. Topics to be covered will include women’s movements, the legal system, contemporary regional politics, the new economy, and popular culture.

This course emphasizes critical reading and writing, so we will learn to work through a wide variety of texts—popular, scholarly, and film—to ask new kinds of questions. Although this is not primarily a theoretical course, we will also be constantly trying to think through how a gender lens changes the ways in which we study politics, the economy, and culture. In this sense, South Asia is just the lab in which we will be exploring a core set of sociological concepts.

II. Course Requirements

Students will be graded according to the following assignments:

1) Weekly reading responses (<300 words): In these assignments, you will reflect upon the readings for the week and connect them with material covered earlier in the class. These are not summaries, but it will be useful for you to state the key concept/contribution of the reading in your response. Mainly, the responses should focus on what stood out to you about the readings and what it made you think about. Each student must post one response to the course conference per week and I encourage you to read one another’s responses.

2) Participation/Attendance: Discussion, exchange, and participation are critical components of this class and class time will be important in facilitating your understanding of the readings. Therefore, attendance is mandatory. More than two absences during the course of the term will dramatically affect your participation grade. Tardiness is not acceptable; if you are more than 10 minutes late to class, it will count as an absence. If you are consistently late by a few minutes, this will affect your participation grade as well.

3) Mini-Research Presentations: Each student will be required to choose a date on which to help set a context for the topic that week. A successful presentation should have not only completed the readings ahead of time, but should also conduct research online, in the library, and/or through interviews/fieldwork to provide the class with a context for thinking about the day’s readings. Materials to review may include, but are not limited to: newspaper/magazine articles, films, interviews, and books. Strategies for presentations should be discussed with me in advance. Presentations should last 10-15 minutes and you must hand in either an annotated bibliography or a description of your research/fieldwork, as applicable.

4) 2 Thinkpieces (1250-1500 words or 4-5 pages double-spaced): Thinkpieces flesh out the key themes of the class in the form of short essays. You will respond to prompts to be handed out in class. These papers are formal and must be constructed around a central argument in response to a selected prompt. You are also free to come up with your own topics, but they must be approved in advance.

5) Final Exam: The exam will include a few short essays (outlining the key aspects of a specific topic in a paragraph), and one longer essay (an analytical question that will ask you to draw upon the readings to analyze a specific issue). Exam questions will always offer choice (i.e. answer 4 of the following 5 short answers or answer 1 of the following two essay questions)

Assignments will be weighted in the final grade as follows:

- Participation/Reading Responses: 20%
- Presentation: 20%
- 2 Thinkpieces: 40% (20% each)
- Final Exam: 20%

*A note about grading: I grade work according to quality, effort, and a demonstrated understanding of the key concepts of the course/assignment. A grade of “B” indicates good work. It means that you have made adequate effort, have shown that you understand the main ideas, and have met the expectations of the class. To get a grade in the “A” range, your work must surpass those expectations. In short, “A’s” are for work at an excellent level. Grades of “C” or below indicate that you have not fulfilled the expectations of the coursework, either by not completing the assignment or by not putting in the required time and effort.

III. Course Materials:

Most of the readings for this course are available either through e-reserve or electronically through the Wellesley library. In addition, you are required to purchase the following texts, available at the bookstore and also on reserve at the library:
