This seminar focuses on central human rights problems and issues in contemporary global society. Our focus is primarily to understand these problems in a sociological frame of reference. The seminar is topical and focuses on some of the more visible issues in the field of human rights: the rise of the humanitarian impulse, modern day humanitarianism, genocide and genocide prevention, slavery in modernity, sex and organ trafficking, and poverty as a human rights issue. In addition to reading deeply in these areas, students will prepare a 20-25 page term paper on a topic of their choice and work in close consultation with the professor throughout the semester.

Course Texts:

Below are the main texts for the class. These are required and close readings are necessary, so they should be purchased at the bookstore.

Susan Sontag, Regarding the Pain of Others. Picador, 2004

Susan D. Moeller, Compassion Fatigue: How the Media Sell Disease, Famine, War and Death
Class Requirements

Since this is an intensive seminar, class attendance and participation is required. If you miss more than three classes for any reason, you will be asked to withdraw from the class and this will be strictly enforced. Each week, each student will generate two questions based on the class readings for that week for general class discussions. These should be written and brought to class. Attendance and participation is worth 30 percent of your grade. There will be two short papers of 5-7 pages each worth 15 percent of your grade. Due dates: for the first paper, October 15, for the second paper, December 3. 40% of your grade will be based on a 20-25 page research paper, which will be the central focus of your outside work in the seminar and due on the last day of final examination period. A basic outline (with annotated bibliography) will be due on October 29. It is expected that each student will work closely with the professor to produce an excellent piece of independent research and students are advised to begin thinking about a topic as soon as possible.
